Bylaw may restrict roaming cats

by CHAD INGRAM
Times Staff

Minden cat owners may want to keep an eye on their kitties as Minden Hills is preparing a bylaw aimed at preventing domestic cats from roaming the village's streets.

At a meeting on October 30, Minden Hills council instructed staff to draw up a bylaw that will likely impose a fine on cat owners who let their pets stray from their properties.

The motion followed a delegation by Minden resident Betty Milford who complained that cats, ones she said she knows are house pets, are fouling her property with feces and urine.

"The cats are still coming, still digging holes outside my front door and messing in the holes," Milford told councillors.

While the township has already designed a feral cat "capture, neuter and release" program that will come into effect on a trial basis in 2009, Milford said that bylaw does not apply to the felines that are allegedly soiling the lawn of her Stouffer Street home.

"These are not feral cats, they're domestic cats," she said, adding that she knows to whom the tagged animals belong.

"Why are cat owners not responsible for the actions of their cats?" Milford asked, noting that dogs are not permitted to roam free in such a fashion. "The owners must somehow be made responsible for the actions of these animals."

Jon Pawson's Rotary exchange to Brazil over the summer months has him itching to travel more - perhaps as an exchange student at university next year.

BRAZIL IS JUST THE BEGINNING

by CHAD INGRAM
Times Staff

A Haliburton Highlands Secondary School student who travelled to Brazil this summer as part of the Rotary youth exchange program says he's been bitten and infected by the travel bug.

Jon Pawson, a Grade 12 student at HHSS, visited Brazil for most of July and August and said he had such an amazing time that he's keen to take part in more exchange programs during his university career, which will begin next fall.

Jon applied for the exchange program, sponsored by the Minden Rotary Club, after friends of his had visited countries such as Japan, Germany and Turkey on Rotary exchanges.

"I was like, I've really got to try this," he said, still noticeably excited about his journey.

Jon flew to Brazil on July 7 and travelled to the northeastern coastal city of Natal with his host family, who were going on vacation.

The 17-year-old was thankful that his host brother, Daniel, and his siblings were fluent in English because otherwise there could have been quite a language barrier to overcome.

"I'm horrible at Portuguese," Jon said, adding that while he had purchased an instructional book on the language, with spring exams and his part-time job, he'd had very little time to read it.

"Plus, Brazilian Portuguese is different from regular Portuguese, anyway," he said with a laugh.

During his visit, Jon attended school with his host brother and had the opportunity to soak up lots of local culture in Araxa, the city of 90,000 where his host family lives.

"In Brazil, lunch is their big meal of the day," he said, explaining that a Brazilian school day runs from 7 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. so that students can head home for lunch.

Parents too come home from work for the meal, which Jon said typically consists of several courses including rice and beans, beef and chicken.

"They don't have salad like we do here," he said, adding that vegetables like sliced tomatoes are simply served with a side of lettuce.

Jon said beans are obviously a staple of the Brazilian diet.

"I don't want to see beans ever again," he joked.

It was also quite apparent how central soccer is to Brazil's national identity.

"They are huge, huge soccer fans," he said. "The closest thing we have I can compare it to is the Stanley Cup finals, but they're like that for every soccer game."

The Olympics were in full swing during Jon's visit and he said after school, students would flock to the nearest electronics store to watch Brazilian matches.

He was also there to see Brazil defeated by Argentina in the tournament.

"When Argentina beat them, they were very upset," he said, adding he was sure one man who was walking around wearing an Argentina jersey on the day of the loss was going to get mobbed.

Jon said while there is a large middle class in Brazil, there is more obvious socioeconomic disparity.

"There is a middle class, but there's a more noticeable gap between them and the poor," he said.

He also noted that almost all Brazilians live in large cities, separated by vast expanses of agricultural land.

"You'd never find something like Haliburton in Brazil," he said, explaining there are virtually no small towns in the country.

During his visit, Jon said that temperatures were hovering at about 25°, cool to most Brazilians.

"People were walking around in coats and pants and I was still wearing shorts, sweating," he said.

He was also surprised to discover that the vast fields full of tall, dark green plants were coffee plantations.

Jon plans to attend university for engineering and said he recently visited the University of Waterloo campus since that school offers a wide array of exchange opportunities.

He would like to do exchange work with the international sustainable development organization Engineers Without Borders and said that after his Brazilian excursion, he is eager to see other parts of the planet such as Europe and Asia.

Jon couldn't say enough about how positive his experience had been, beaming as he recalled his journey.

"It was amazing," he said. "I recommend it to everybody."

In December, Jon's host brother will travel to Canada to spend a couple of months in Haliburton.

Jon said that when he asked Daniel what his impressions of Canada were, he responded, "Trees, rocks, lakes, snow and Tim Hortons."

The application approval process for short-term and long-term exchanges being put on by the Minden and Haliburton Rotary clubs for the upcoming year is already underway, but anyone interested in knowing more about the programs is welcome to contact a member of either club.

Upgrade water now, benefit tomorrow

by CHAD INGRAM
Times Staff

Minden Hills will be applying to the federal Building Canada Fund for funding to help with the construction of a water tower for the village of Minden.

Councillors resolved to apply for the funding at a meeting on October 30.

The estimated capital cost for the proposed project is $1.9 million.

As Minden Hills Reeve Jim McMahon explained, the water pressure of Minden's current water supply system is below provincial standards and if the village is to provide water for a growing population, changes have to be made.

"We've got to upgrade our infrastructure," McMahon said. "We're looking down the road."

McMahon pointed to the new subdivision currently under construction on Minden's Deep Bay Road as an example of the kind of expansion that is putting pressure on the village's aging water supply system.

Minden Hills's environment and property operations manager Bob Romberg noted that an increased water supply is also vital to ensure proper fire protection in an area with a growing population.

McMahon said it is the township's plan for the proposed tower to be constructed on Mount Minden – the large hill on Minden's east periphery where the village's current water reservoir is located.

"We're in discussions with the landowner," McMahon said, adding that the project would likely require about two acres of space and that the landowner seemed open to the idea.

McMahon could not say what the cost of acquiring the land might be.

The water tower would stand approximately 22.5 metres in height with a tank diameter of 16.5 metres and a storage capacity of 1,500 cubic metres.

Aesthetically, McMahon said the structure would likely bear a resemblance to Bobcaygeon's water tower and that the township would like to have the words "Minden Hills" painted on the outside of the tank.

McMahon said it would likely be a number of months before the municipality hears back on the success of its funding application.

While a public open house on the proposed project was held on October 28, no one attended.

While population grows, tax base static

Boomers turning cottages into year-round homes puts new stress on municipal services

by CHAD INGRAM
Times Staff

A growing number of people turning their cottages into year-round residences means the county is looking at an increasing population while retaining a fairly static tax base.

This phenomenon is becoming a major concern for the presidents of local property owners' associations, who say the county needs to start looking at strategies to deal with the increasing number of baby boomers who are renovating their cottages into year-round homes and relocating permanently to Haliburton County.

While many of these cottagers have been paying property taxes in the county for decades, Paul MacInnes, president of the Maple, Beech and Cameron Lakes Area Property Owners' Association, said last week their relocation to the area means an increasing demand on the county to provide more services.

MacInnes said a recent survey of his association's 200 members revealed that some 80 per cent intend to turn their cottages into year-round homes within the next five to 10 years.

"We see it on almost a monthly basis," he said, referring to what seems to be a steady influx of boomers retiring to the area.

MacInnes, himself a former Torontonian who recently relocated to the Haliburton hideaway he has owned since the 1970s, said he expects thousands of cottagers will relocate to the area in the near future.

"I do think it will have a major impact on the county," he said, adding that the demand for road maintenance, landfills, healthcare facilities and public transportation is bound to increase as more and more people retire to the county.

MacInnes said he's had discussions with some of the presidents of the county's 22 other property owners' associations and that they too are concerned about the phenomenon.

"It's not unique to our association," he said.

Norma Goodger, president of the Kushog Lake Property Owners' Association, said she is seeing a similar trend among her association's 300 or so members.

While her association has not performed a survey, Goodger said based on the postal codes of her members, she estimates about a fifth are already permanent residents of the area and expects that number to increase in coming years.

"It will be an added burden to the municipalities," she said, adding that the attraction of physicians to the area and increasing the area's waste disposal capacity need to become countywide priorities.

While MacInnes doesn't think the population shift will necessarily require an increase in property taxes, he said it's important that the county and its townships carefully review and scrutinize the efficiency with which they spend tax dollars.

"They should embrace it; understand that it's happening."

STEPHEN FOSTER

"Are we doing the absolute best with the money we have?" he asked, pointing to the ongoing airport expansion process at Stanhope Airport as an example of what he said is inefficiency with municipal funds.

"How good a job are they doing of attaining funding from other levels of government?" MacInnes continued, adding that there are provincial and federal funding programs that exist that could help the county provide more services.

Stephen Foster works and lives in Toronto, but owns a home in Haliburton village as well as a cottage on Loon Lake.

A former director with the Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Association and a member of several local community groups including Environment Haliburton, Foster said the increase of full-time residents in Haliburton is something he's been pondering for the past three years.

He said the county needs to start looking at methods to address the situation.

"They have to understand the dynamics that are going on," Foster said. "They should embrace it; understand that it's happening."

Like MacInnes, Foster said the county should be looking at what kind of financial help it might acquire from the provincial and federal levels of governments and should be initiating a brainstorming process.

"How do you judge what you're supposed to provide?" he said, suggesting that creating a panel with both private and public sector representatives to discuss solutions could be helpful.

"You've got to sit down and give something a lot of thought."

Foster, a geography expert who has done consulting work with some of the county's municipalities, said he knows of several people who would make great contributors to such a panel.

"This county is a talent pool of immense dimension," he said. "Let's be proactive."

Foster said he has discussed his concerns over Haliburton's increasing population with the reeves of three of the county's four townships and that, for the most part, they seemed receptive to taking action on the problem, so long as it was done in a fashion acceptable to the area's taxpayers.

Foster also suggested the idea of forming non-governmental organizations to deal with the provision of certain services requested by only a portion of the county's population, paid for by only the people who are requesting the service.

While Foster said he wasn't aware of any governments that have such a system in place, he said perhaps the county could become an innovator.

"Why not make it Haliburton?" he said.

Foster said he had put in a request to the county for any studies that had been done regarding Haliburton's changing population demography, but said it he had not received a response.

"It's something we're aware of," said Haliburton Warden Eleanor Harrison.

"It's on a lot of our minds all the time. Unfortunately, it's not something that can be dealt with overnight."

EDITORIAL COMMENT

The baby-boomers are coming

HALIBURTON COUNTY AND ITS TOWNSHIPS have a lot work to do as increasing numbers of baby-boomers begin to retire and relocate permanently to the Haliburton cottages they have vacationed in for so many years. What this means for the county is a growing population on a relatively static tax base. The real challenge that lies ahead is to figure out a way to provide this influx of new permanent residents with all the services they require, without imposing a gigantic tax hike on the area.

While it's true that some boomers are tearing down old family cabins and replacing them with large, A-frame chalets, essentially volunteering themselves to help increase the tax base, others will simply spend a few grand to winterize Aunt Gurty's old cabin, leaving their property taxes at status quo. As we'll see in a decade or so, the end result will be a Haliburton population twice what is today, with a tax base that has not correspondingly doubled.

And they are coming. The boomers are coming. After decades of slaving away in offices, classrooms and factories in the Big Smoke, they are ready to turn the cottages that have been their summer paradises for so many years into year-round residences. They are ready to kick up their heels, do some fishing, read a book and enjoy the peaceful surroundings of Haliburton County.

The president of one local property owners' association has said that more than 80 per cent of his 200 members are planning to turn their cottages into full-time residences in the next five to 10 years.

And other cottagers' associations in the area are reporting similar trends. While the county's warden said she and many other local politicians are aware of the impending population shift, it's important that a planning process begin as soon as possible.

Why not talk to property owners' associations to get a handle on just how many part-time Haliburton residents plan on becoming full-time Haliburton residents in the near future?

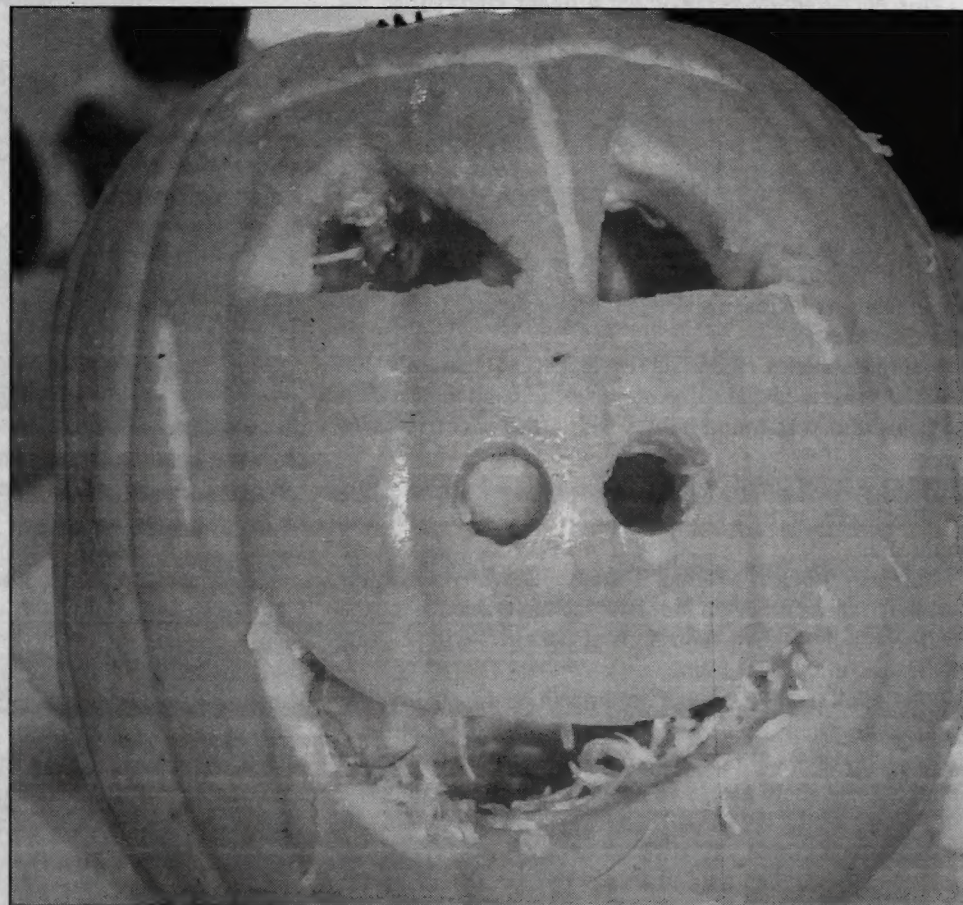

Why not establish some kind of panel consisting of both public and private sector representatives to identify just what the volume of the needs of these people will be and how the county could go about accommodating them?

Why not review the efficiency with which the tax dollars of the county and its townships are currently being spent?

Why not research the ways in which the provincial and federal governments could help ease the financial burden of the impending population shift?

Now is the time to get the proverbial ball rolling on this situation. Because they're coming. The boomers are coming.

Times readers write

Airport a mistake

To the Editor:

I wonder how many people are typing away like me at 10 p.m. because they are so frustrated and disgusted with the most stupid decision ever made at a council meeting in Haliburton County.

As a resident in Algonquin Highlands I read the announcement of the vote to go forward with the expansion of the airport with little surprise and great concern. First, I must say thank you to councillors Tom Gardner and Carol Moffatt for keeping perspective and caution and voting no.

To the other councillors I ask where is the common sense that God gave you?! After all of the letters in the paper, presentations and protests at council and public meetings three councillors have continued to disregard all very logical questions. They have answered not one question given to them and have not given a clear vision as to how this airport expansion is to make a profit. The feasibility study was for logistics, not business.

Read closely - no one wants an industrial park in Algonquin Highlands! Why would people in this tranquil, naturally beautiful area want industrial factories? Please get your heads straightened out!

It is outrageous that $90,000 was spent on a feasibility study. Councillor Don Shortreed feels this is reason to continue - to what, continue wasting more of my tax dollars? To people living in Algonquin Highlands paying one-third of $3.4 million has to involve a major tax increase. Does it not make you angry to think you will have to pay $2,759 per year more over 10 years for an airport that has lost revenue every year? That the world economy is at a crisis - gas prices rise and fall, cost of living is rising and jobs are being cut - and these councillors decide "it is time to spend money..."?

It is hard enough to make ends meet, even with a double income, in raising a family. We will consider moving from this municipality if this continues.

Look around you Algonquin Highland residents. Consider new candidates for the next election in two years. Start talking among yourselves to put forward new people because these three councillors must go!

Trick or treat

THE OTHER DAY I happened to find an online article in which the author purported that you could use animal training techniques to influence the behavior of your spouse. She said that techniques used by dolphin and dog trainers were also useful in relationships. After reading the whole thing, I had to laugh aloud.

"What are you howling at?" my wife called from the next room.

I quickly summed up the article in a couple of concise sentences and said, "That's ridiculous, huh?"

"Sure it is," she said, "now come here."

Instinctively, I turned away and acted as if I hadn't heard her.

"Come! I've got a treat for you."

My ears perked up. "What kind?"

"Bumbleberry Pie."

I ran over shaking uncontrollably with joy. Then I asked where the pie was.

"You do these dishes, and I'll get it ready," she said, while scratching me under the chin.

A little while later after I finished the dishes, she placed a sliver of pie in a plate.

"Sit," she said. "Sit."

"Sure," I answered, as I sat down and began salivating.

"Can I have a fork too?"

"Sure," she said, "give me a pa... hand."

As I put a hand out, she patted me on the head and placed a fork in my palm.

"Talk about ridiculous, huh?"

I continued. "Thinking that any person could use such simple techniques to train an adult to do your bidding. How unsuspecting and guileless does that author think we are?"

"Yeah....oh yeah, it's a crazy theory," she agreed. "Hey, the mail is here. Would you please fetch, I mean get it for me?"

"But what about the pie?"

"I'll heat it up while you get the mail. Go! Go on! Go boy! Go!"

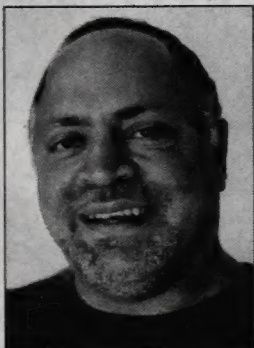

Excited, I ran out the door, went straight to the mailbox, got the mail, and brought it straight back to her, placing it in her hand... just like we had practised hundreds of times when we first met.

"Thanks," she said, as she patted me on the head. "Atta boy! That's a good boy!"

"No problem," I replied, only too happy to please, though I wasn't sure why. But suddenly something seemed very wrong with this picture. Over the next five minutes, I was really bothered by it too.

Then, it hit me. So I ran upstairs to get her slippers.

BEYOND35

Steve Galea

"Oh, you are such a good boy aren't you? You're such a good boy!" she cooed when I returned.

We didn't speak much for the rest of the morning. She was busy doing reading her dog training books and I was at my computer in my office, still wondering how some people can come up with such ridiculous theories. I mean, when you think about it, the whole concept is almost insulting.

I guess what I'm saying is how simplistic do they think we are? Does that author actually think we have no free will? That we are controlled by impulses and taught stimuli?

The thought of it was absolutely ludicrous. I was in the process of exploring that line of thinking just a little more but just then Carol called from the kitchen.

"Steve, come for lunch!"

I dropped everything and ran over.

"I'm here," I announced, "I'm here."

"Oh, that's a good boy..." she said. "That's a good boy."

"Now, quit circling around me," she said as she stirred the soup. "Sit. Sit now!"

When lunch was over, she stepped in my office.

"Want to go for a walk?" she said. "We haven't had our walk today!"

Needless to say, it was great. We got to the fields and then she let me run all over the place until I was really tired. And, on the way back home, I walked beside her.

We arrived home and she began to comb the burrs out of my coat. That's when she and I decided agreed that the whole notion of being able to train your spouse was neither possible nor even desirable.

That night, at bedtime, I curled up in a ball and got comfortable. But then I began to think about that article again. So much so that I sat up and began to whine about it.

"Shush!" she commanded. "Lie down and go to sleep."

And, as she rubbed my belly, I realized how ridiculous it was.

BETWEEN THE BULLETS and the chainsaw, these two weeks of the year are not the favourites of The Brown Dog Jiggs.

During the other 50 weeks of the year, The Brown Dog pretty much roams at will whether we are working or just walking in the woods around Sapsucker Ridge.

Once in a very great while some imagined prey sends him into a barking frenzy and he sets out in his version of hot pursuit.

After about half a dozen of his strides, the game is in the next concession but Jiggs stays away long enough that he can come back, muddy-pawed and tongue dangling to his knees and say, "You know, I almost got him."

In these first two weeks of November, these are also the words of men and women in orange coats climbing the ridges of Hindon Township or wading the swamps of Lutterworth.

The orange coats go back to their hunt camp for a cup of hot cocoa or something stronger and The Brown Dog comes back to lick himself dry, curl up on a mat of leaves and pretend to sleep, watching me work out of the corner of one eye.

Or he patrols the perimeter of my position, anointing shrubs and sniffing his way through an imaginary grid he has laid over the beaver meadow at the bottom of the slope.

Liberty won't do in deer season. Technically, his chases are against the law, a capital offence for dogs.

Jiggs also happens to be about the same size and colour as a fawn, or so hunters tell me, and that could get him shot, too.

So this time of the year, there is no lollygagging when we head into the woods. He must follow close on my heels and when we get to our workplace, he is tied to a tree.

For a moment, he is a one-dog picket line, barking mad at his plight. Then he curls up and pretends to sleep, watching me work out of the corner of one eye.

Most Novembers, somebody's hound shows up on Sapsucker Ridge, lost and bewildered after a long chase. Even as I write, a lost hound from what used to be the Short Hill Hunt Club is wandering the woods around Sapsucker Ridge.

On the first Monday of November, it is as though some celestial hand in the sky shakes out a cupful of hounds over Haliburton and they drift down to speckle the landscape like parmesan on pasta and then they spend the next two weeks finding their way back home.

A couple of years ago, a Scotch Line bowser showed up with hormones so stirred by a pretty girl dog back home that he overlooked Jiggs' gender and became so interested in him that The Brown Dog finally had to sit right down to protect his dignity.

Years before there was a Jiggs, two lost hounds camped out in my woodshed. When I opened my cabin door to them, they made themselves right at home in my living-room chairs and ask for a cup of coffee.

For Jiggs, the wandering hounds, the sounds of distant gunfire and being tied to a tree are just the final straw after too many chainsaw days.

He is fed up with being ignored. Once you've treed a turkey, watching maples being turned into firewood is pretty tame stuff. The noise of the saw frightens him and he can't understand why I keep hitting chunks of wood with a stick.

One day I stand a firewood chunk on end for splitting. The Brown Dog, bored beyond endurance, comes over for a look. He sniffs one chunk, steps back to bow the Smooth Collie bow that is an invitation to play and raises his head in a long haroo.

Then, with great deliberation, he stands up straight, reaches out his right paw and knocks over the chunk. He wags his tail and grins.

Where is Canadian Tire?

To the Editor:

Where is the new Canadian Tire store that was supposed to be built in the town of Minden? After numerous frivolous complaints that were finally put to rest and making Canadian Tire jump through hoops, council should be demanding to know when the project is starting.

We now have two key street corners in this town that are not developed. Jobs in this area are scarce and even if they are low paying it's a start for some young people or a second income for some families. Council needs to be more aggressive in finding out what the delay is and, more importantly, telling the taxpayers what's going on.

Also the Ministry of Transportation should be taken to task for not allowing an entrance off Highway 35. If traffic is a concern then slow it down going through town.

While I am writing my once-in-a-lifetime letter please do something about our landfill site. You have won me over in regards to recycling but the site should be changed so that we don't have to make about two or three stops while at the site.

Devolin ready for Ottawa

by PEGGY ARMSTRONG
Special to the Times

Since his landslide re-election as the Conservative MP for Haliburton-Kawartha Lakes-Brock, Barry Devolin has had some not good days and some tragic ones.

Immediately following the October 14 election, he spent two days with extended family for the funeral of Crystal Bain, a very close friend of his wife, Ursula. Bain died tragically, just a few days after giving birth to her second child. He took personal time after that, getting in a 10 km race in Waterloo. His finishing time was "not great" because he didn't have time to run during the election.

He was preparing to go to Ottawa for a couple of days to get caught up. He anticipates Parliament will reconvene next month. He's speculating November 24, but notes there are many legal administrative issues to be addressed before MPs can sit again. Devolin has two answers when asked what role he wants to play in the returning government. The short answer, he said, is: "I'm a team player. I will do what the Prime Minister wants me to do." In his longer answer, he delves into the making of a federal cabinet. "Experts say creating a cabinet is the single most difficult task [for the PM] because there are so many considerations." For example, regional balances must be taken into account. In Ontario, there are 51 MPs to fill seven or eight seats. He said most of them are very experienced and a number of them, like himself, have been elected three times.

Fire consumed a house at 118 Pine Ave. in Haliburton Monday afternoon.

Minden helps put out Haliburton blaze

by MATT JAMES
Times Staff

At approximately 3 p.m. members of the Minden Hills fire department were called to Haliburton for a major house fire at 118 Pine Street.

Minden Hills fire chief Doug Schell said his team of 11 firefighters arrived at the scene at approximately 3:20 p.m. joining the 23 firefighters already battling the blaze from the Dysart et al fire department.

The extra help was certainly needed as countless trips were made to refill the fire trucks with water.

"For major fires we have this policy for calling in mutual aid for manpower and water supply," said Schell.

Finding a water source in rural areas like the county of Haliburton isn't always the easiest. Yesterday firefighters struggled to find a water source as they were unable to block any water flow in nearby ditches.

"That's probably one of the biggest reasons why you get called for mutual aid, for water shuttle," Schell said.

Dysart et al fire chief Myles Maughan said the blaze was likely started by ashes from a woodstove that were put on the front porch in a cardboard box.

Minden Hills firefighters were dismissed from the scene at approximately 7 p.m.

Mum's the word on South Beaver Lake

by CHAD INGRAM
Times Staff

Property owners on South Beaver Lake who do not support the idea of boating restrictions will be given a chance to express their views before Minden Hills submits an application for the restrictions to Transport Canada.

Earlier this month, a group of cottagers from the lake made a presentation to Minden Hills council. They want council to submit a request to Transport Canada, asking the federal transportation body to limit boat speeds on the lake to 15 km/h as well as enact noise regulations.

Under Transport Canada's policies, such a request must come from a township and not private residents.

While a petition has shown that 25 of the 31 property owners on the lake favour the idea of boating restrictions, councillors agreed at their meeting on October 30 that the lake's six other property owners should have the opportunity to contact council with their opinions on boating restrictions.

"I can't see any reason why we wouldn't support it," said councillor Peter Oylar. "However, we haven't heard from the other side."

While the recommendation of Minden Hills staff was for council to request that the cottagers of South Beaver Lake form a cottagers' association and request more information before proceeding with the process, councillor Barb Reid said she didn't see the point in the staff recommendation.

"They effectively have a cottage association now," Reid said, noting that the cottagers had banded together with the creation of their petition.

Reid also pointed out the township's role in the situation is purely that of a conduit.

"It's all up to Transport Canada whether the restrictions are granted," she said. "And it's not up to the township to enforce. It costs us nothing to support this application."

Councillors resolved that a motion to proceed with the application be deferred until February to give the lake's other cottagers a chance to contact council.

Home games tough to win for RiverKings

by MATT JAMES
Times Staff

A lot of hockey can be played in one week, especially if you're the Minden RiverKings. The team is 4-11-1 coming off three games in six days where they went loss-win-loss.

A 6-4 loss October 28 against the Brock Bucks was a heartbreaker. The RiverKings had tied the game 4-4 late in the third, scoring two goals in less than a minute. But Brock took the lead back a minute later and would land an empty net goal.

The road trip to Richmond Hill on November 1 for a 9-6 win was a good one for the boys. But the day didn't start off so well – the bus broke down just outside of Coboconk.

During the five hours the team waited for the bus to be fixed, a woman from the area brought the players water and cookies. The Good Samaritan is asked to contact coach Mike Jeschke at mike@mindenriverkings.com.

Seven of the RiverKings' nine goals came in the first five minutes of the game. Their motivation to succeed may have had something to do with facing the team's former goaltender, Jeremy Schaeffer, who had been traded to Richmond Hill.

The coach was happy to see his players turn it up a notch but now that he's seen them perform he's expecting to see that on a more regular basis, regardless of who is in the other net.

The RiverKings' most recent game was a blowout 12-3 loss at home on Sunday against the South Muskoka Shield. The RiverKings are winless at home and coach Jeschke is dumbfounded. He can't understand why they team is unable to win at home.

"It's night and day from at home and on the road," said Jeschke.

The Township of Minden Hills
In Season, Every Season

There's something good in every one of these cans.

Every aluminum and steel can that gets recycled is put to good use. Empty aluminum beverage cans are turned into brand new cans – often back on store shelves within 60 days. Steel cans are turned back into food containers, too, but they can also become parts of automobiles, bridges or even new houses. Aluminum and steel cans can be recycled over and over, infinitely.

Making new products from recycled material uses much less energy than making them from raw materials. And the more cans you recycle, the more money your municipality raises to finance its recycling program.

We're half way there.

Right now, about 50% of all cans in Ontario get recycled. The ones that don't are wasted, ending in landfill sites rather than being put to valuable use. Let's all put more into our Blue Box, and get more out of it.

Can we put more aluminum and steel cans into the Blue Box? Can we divert needless waste from landfill sites? Can we save more energy? Can we put every empty can to good use?

The answer is simple. Yes, we can.

Space provided through a partnership between industry and Ontario municipalities to support waste diversion programs.

Matt James/TIMES

The RiverKings are 4-3-1 on the road. "I have no answer. I do not understand at all," said Jeschke.

He's tried getting to the rink earlier, getting to the rink later, defencemen on forward, forwards on defence.

And he and assistant coach Brooks Robinson have talked to the team in depth on the bus on road trips.

At Sunday's game, Jeschke said, "Right from the opening face off we weren't there. It was just one of those nights."

But the difference between Sunday's game and other home-ice losses is that the RiverKings had kept the other games close.

Jeschke couldn't even point out one player; the entire team was at fault.

"It was a team effort in futility, I guess you could say," said Jeschke, able to joke and move on from the game.

When asked what he was going to work on most with the team, he said, "Well, after Sunday's game, conditioning."

Maybe his players were tired, but if that's the case the boys will need to pull up their socks.

"These guys are here to make it to the next level. If you can't play two or three games in two or three nights, you can't play at the next level," said Jeschke.

While it may look like he's lost the team, don't count them out.

In the last four games the RiverKings are 2-2, playing .500 level hockey.

During that time the RiverKings added four more players to the roster giving them three solid lines.

In fact, the roster is only five players short the maximum players allowed to dress for a game.

"And from two weeks ago that's a huge step forward," said Jeschke.

"Our skill and talent level are there, that's pretty undeniable. Our first line is as good as any top line out there, if not better."

Happy with the lineup Jeschke and the team have wiped the slate clean and are starting anew with 27 games left to play.

"We wanted to set the bar at what's achievable," he said.

"We're six games under .500 right now.... I would like to win every game for the rest of the season, but you have to be realistic."

The next RiverKings home game is Sunday, November 9 vs. Espanola.

Feral cat program won't help with domestic cats

"I like the cats, but it's what they're being allowed to do [that is the problem]."

Deputy-reeve Cheryl Murdoch sympathized with Milford, agreeing that the township's feral cat program will not solve the problem of domestic cats running free and that too many cat owners are being irresponsible.

Murdoch suggested that solving the problem might require some help from the county.

"We are a mess in Haliburton County by not having an animal shelter," she said, adding that the county should be creating an animal shelter, which its four municipalities would help pay for.

Councillor Peter Oyler agreed.

"We've got to ask the county to step up to the plate on this matter," Oyler said, adding that Minden Hills should be looking at copies of domestic cat bylaws from other townships to help with the creation of its own policy regarding wandering housecats.

Oyler noted that some municipalities require cats, like dogs, be restrained by some kind of lead when they are off their owners' properties.

While the concept of a county-run animal shelter has been discussed in the past, Haliburton Warden Eleanor Harrison said the concept is problematic because of the immense size of Haliburton County as well as the cost it would involve.

"I'm thinking about the cost," Harrison said.

"We've got to ask the county to step up to the plate on this matter."

COUNCILLOR
PETER OYLER

But, she added, she'd be willing to discuss the matter with Minden Hills council if they brought it to the county table.

Reeve Jim McMahon also agreed it was time for the municipality to start taking action against cat owners who allow their pets to roam free.

"Maybe if people start losing cats to the program, they might get a wake-up call," McMahon said.

"There has to be some responsibility shown on the part of the cat owner."

Councillors agreed that a domestic cat bylaw could only apply to tagged animals since the township does not have a pound and since there is no other way to determine if the cats are in fact house pets.

Council gave Minden Hills chief building official Ken Jones four weeks to draw up the bylaw.

Jones said last week he did not wish to speculate on what kind of specific regulations and fines the bylaw might entail.

Another banner year

The village of Minden wants to make 2009 another banner year. The Minden Festival of Banners committee is once again auctioning off the banners that have festooned the downtown's lampposts for the past year. The money raised is used to buy materials to create new banners, painted by both local artists and students, for the upcoming year. A binder with pictures of the banners and a bid sheet is available at The Storeroom. The approximate cost of creating one banner is $50.

Kids' pumpkin names as creative as the carving

DORSET NEWS

Melissa Alfano

705-766-0076

melalfano@hotmail.com

The annual kids pumpkin-carving party at the Dorset Recreation Centre on October 30 was a jam-packed success with 37 children and their parents participating.

The kids had a blast carving their own pumpkins and giving them creative names. Some examples include Morgan Aubin-Vardy's "Dorkterver," Peri Coombs's "Mr. Spock," and Simon Douglass's "Supercalifragilisticpealidoshous."

The many wonderful Jack-o-lanterns were lit up and displayed at the children's Hallowe'en party the following night. Once again, the turnout was good and everyone had a great time.

The music, games and activities were organized by the Dorset recreation committee and manned by Dorset Lions Club and recreation committee members.

The games and activities included Black and Orange Balloon Bull's Eye, Batty Catapult, Hallowe'en Dice, Jelly Bean Guess, Guess the Weight of the Pumpkin, Bean Bag Toss, Scarecrow and Pumpkin Fridge Magnets craft and draws for prizes.

Congratulations to David Johnson who won the jelly bean guess and Sarah Russell who guessed the weight of the pumpkin. Prize packages for both David and Sarah included candy, a $5 gift certificate for Robinson's General Store, a pepperoni pizza gift certificate from Little Caesars in Huntsville and a 10-visit youth pass to the Dorset Recreation Centre.

On behalf of the community, a big thank you goes out to the Dorset Lions Club, The Dorset Recreation Committee, Robinson's General Store and Little Caesar's Pizza, Huntsville, without whose support the Hallowe'en activities would not be possible.

The Dorset Library branch hours are; Tuesday from 4 to 6:30 p.m., Wednesday from 2 to 4:30 p.m., Thursday from 6 to 8:30 p.m. and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. Use it or lose it people of Dorset!

Dorset Book Club meets at the Dorset Recreation Centre on Wednesday, November 5 at 1 p.m. and will be discussing the book Water for Elephants by Sara Gruen. All are welcome to attend. For more information, contact the library at 766-9969.

Moms and tots playgroup meets at the centre on Fridays from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. All newborns, infants, toddlers and preschool aged children and their caregivers are welcome to the free weekly program. What a great opportunity for some fun, socializing, toys, books and crafts. For more information, please call Cheryl at 766-0874.

Notices will come out next month in the mailboxes reminding everyone that the annual food and toy drive is Wednesday, December 3 and where the trucks will go, the timing and about leaving porch lights on. However, now is the time to watch for bargains in the food stores and pick items up. Keep in mind that baby food is appreciated, as well as items for teenagers (makeup, music, etc.), cat and dog food, toilet paper, etc., as well as the regular food items - please no perishables.

Special wishes for the week of November 2 to 8 go out to Don Inch, Bryce Drinkwater, Kerry Lock, and Verne Johnson, Happy anniversary to Willa and Hubert Blais and happy 19th anniversary to my special husband Joe. Happy 93rd birthday to Ellen Booker on November 10. Celebrate and have fun on your special day!

To submit an item of interest or a birthday wish, please email me at melalfano@hotmail.com or give me a call at 705-766-0076.

What to do with all this energy?

STANHOPE LIFE

Gina Atkinson

pinereflections@sympatico.ca

Not much to write about this week except that I am all worn out! This past weekend we dismantled the haunted house and took the roof off the garden centre. This is the climax to a busy season that always makes me a trifle emotional. The past few weeks have been spent preparing for the winter months, saying good bye to our seasonal friends and getting mentally ready for what winter has in store.

Since I have high energy levels, inactivity creates a problem for me. A friend of mine likes to refer to our kind of people as having manic energy. Not to be confused with maniac!

Anyway, I will start my new year resolutions early, with not griping being on the top of my list. If you see me and I look miserable, you have my permission to set me straight!

October was full of neat things to do; we should be so lucky with November.

Upcoming is another Texas Hold 'em poker night at the Stanhope firefighters hall, located on North Shore Road. This has been a very successful night run by the Stanhope firefighters. They will be dropping off information that I will forward on to you at a later date.

I will not rattle on about nothing so I will wish you a good week.

Some of the finished products are displayed on tables in the community centre. The pumpkins were judged in a contest the following night.

Kids carve creativity

The community of Dorset gathered for the annual pumpkin carving party at the community centre on October 30. The event is supported by the Dorset Lions Club who purchased 40 pumpkins for the kids along with hot dogs and drinks; some kids were even multi-tasking eating a hot dog and scooping out the pumpkin's innards. The kids also received a little treat bag.

The community centre became a little louder once the children got into the swing of things.

Brent Douglas, 11, of Dorset gets down and dirty using his bare hands to scoop out the pumpkin guts.

It is a beautiful, indeed likely record setting, November day here at the old farmhouse and hard to concentrate on the pressing tasks at hand. I still have several projects to complete before the Kinmount and Area Artisans Guild Bazaar coming up at the Community Centre on Saturday, November 15. The buzzing of cluster flies on sunlit window glass continues. Irritating enough as it is during the day my Monday evening hours spent working on the column means light from lamp and computer screen wakes the critters up to reappear and dance again. Sometimes I almost think that those wretched ladybugs weren't quite so bad after all. Memory fades and so the operational word here is "almost"!

Note that the annual flu clinic continues at the Kinmount & District Health Centre on Mondays and Wednesdays 11:30 a.m. to 12 noon and 4:30 to 5:00 p.m. and again on Thursdays 11:30 a.m. to 12 noon and 7:30 to 8:00 p.m. There is no need for an appointment if you come at those times but please bring your health card with you.

Do plan a drive to the Kinmount area this weekend November 7 through 9 and visit the open houses at several locations. Jamie and Bernie Nicholson will welcome visitors to their log Pottery in the Forest Studio at 197 French Line off the Crystal Lake Road (488-2400) with guest textile artist Nadine Papp. On the Galway Road at 219, Judy and Ed Bunville extend the warmth of their country home filled with Christmas treasures (488-2201) while at 368 Linda and Bill McGillivray, along with Cheryl Lafferty invite you to Crazy Horse Studio (488-2860) showcasing stained glass and folk art.

Also Explore Your Senses with hosts Sarah and Kevin at Harmony Farms (488-3300) for their annual pre-Christmas event where, in addition to treats and gifts on hand, orders for custom gift baskets, cakes, catering services and more can also be placed. Harmony Farms can be found at 3290 County Road 121. All are open both Saturday and Sunday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. with some Friday hours as well except at Judy's Porch & Barn so for more specific information give a call as listed.

"At the going down of the sun and in the morning we will remember them." John McGrath branch 441 Royal Canadian Legion, Kinmount will hold Remembrance Day services on Saturday, November 8 at Gelert at 1 p.m., Sunday, November 9 at Burnt River at 9 a.m. and Kinmount at 11 a.m., Tuesday, November 11 at Kinmount at 11 a.m. and Gooderham at 2 p.m. All are welcome to attend. The number of young children participating in last year's service in Kinmount brought home the realization that now their generation is increasingly aware of war and its casualties through the daily images on television screens. We are so fortunate to live in Canada – "glorious and free" and ever grateful to those who have kept it so.

Please note that the meeting of the Galway and Area Ratepayers Association originally scheduled for this Saturday, November 8 at the Galway Hall has been postponed until further notice.

Remembrance Day a time of reflection

by CHRIS MCGOWAN
Special to the Times

As I was driving home from a visit with my mother, I realized that her ability to remember has regressed even more. My mother, Alma Orabel Riddiford (nee Carter), is an elderly woman, 87 years of age, living in a retirement home in Aurora. She is frustrated with her memory loss.

Recently she was challenged with "Where did she put her wallet?" We did find it eventually, zipped up snugly in her makeup bag, where all wallets should be, right? Sometimes it is not fun getting old.

My mother is a World War II veteran. She was a WREN in the Royal Canadian Navy; her war service badge was issued May 3, 1942. I know this is the date of issuance for the badge because when we found her wallet; it was kept with all of the other important documents that she needed to identify herself. It is her badge of honour.

As children, my sister and I were accustomed to joining our mother at the cenotaph in Toronto on Remembrance Day. I remember being pulled out of school and observing the laying of the wreaths, the blowing of the lone bugle, and the emotion that gripped all attendees. I too cried, not understanding completely at such a young age why there was so much emotion on this day of remembrance.

My father, Robert Roy Riddiford, also served our country in the army during World War II. He passed away seven years ago.

My mother's eldest brother George Frederick Carter served in the Royal Canadian Navy; however, he was killed in his 23rd year. He was just another one of the many who were lost due to war.

In my parents' retiring years, as always, they recognized November 11th. Their routine was to observe the 11th hour with solitude, watching the Remembrance Day memorial on T.V. Immediately following the service a mandatory drink poured to raise a glass to the fallen. I don't remember many words being exchanged. I am sure the combined emotions that overtook them were respect and pain, and words were not needed. They understood, because they had lived it.

So here I am thinking of my mother as we are approaching yet another Remembrance Day, and wondering if she will remember. Remember all the experiences that she, along with many other Canadians of her age went through as they served our country. They lost so many friends, and family members. Will she remember all the stories that she and my father told both my sister and I many years ago? If I had to put money on it, I'd say she will!

In the end, I do believe we all must remember the contributions that our service men and women have given to help maintain the standard of the country we live in. I know I won't forget. I hope you won't either.

Chris McGowan is a long-time Koshlong Lake cottager who hopes to eventually retire to the Highlands.

Card of thanks

*A million times I've needed you
A million times I've cried,
If love could have saved you
You never would have died.
Things we feel most deeply
Are the hardest things to say,
My dearest one, I loved you,
In a very special way.
If I could have one lifetime wish
One dream that could come true,
I'd pray to God with all my heart
For yesterday and you.*

Wife Marion and family of the late Ross Stickwood would like to express our sincere gratitude to Kirstan and Barry of Monks funeral home for their expertise and kindness making all the arrangements both in Minden and Queensville and for being there to help us all the way. To the United Church ladies for the tasty luncheon they prepared, enjoyed by all. Many thanks to our family and friends who were there for us offering support and sharing fond memories. For the lovely cards, flowers and condolences, donations to Hyland Crest residence council and charities of their choice, it meant so much. To the Royal Canadian Legion Branch 636 for the service in Ross's honour he would have been so proud and the many occasions helping us with his wheel chair so he could attend special functions. To Hyland Crest and the nursing staff for the great care given to Ross when we could no longer keep him at home, also for the kindness given to our family when we visited him, you will be in our memories.

Skinner, Brian - In loving memory of a wonderful dad.

*Many the thoughts I give to you
As the long hours go by.
Thinking of the things we used to

Sometimes they make me smile,
Sometimes they make me cry.

Memories of you and me, daddy.*

TURNER, Bruce John - Passed away after a courageous battle on Friday, October 31, 2008, with his loving family & dearly loved cat Maggie surrounding him at Sunnybrook Hospital, in his 60th year. Bruce was the son of the late Wilbert Ralph and Mary Scott Turner, loving and devoted father to Jennifer Alls (Chris), Erin Turner (Wayne), and Laurie Turner, dear grandfather to Benjamin Alls, loving brother of Brian Turner (Blanche), special cousin to Diana Davies (Ross) and fondly remembered by his extended family and many dear friends.

Bruce moved to Haliburton in 1979 after working for the Toronto Star as the paper's photo editor. He continued his passion for photography in Haliburton by operating his own business, Bruce Turner Photography. Bruce's natural talent in construction allowed him to build a beautiful home in the community for his family with plenty of property for snowmobiling, badminton, gardening and a driveway that made for excellent tobogganing in the winter.

Bruce had an incredible amount of love for hockey, golf, cooking, Christmas time and board games, but most of all for his beloved cats Jaws, Atticus, Maggie & three treasured daughters. Bruce's adoration for and dedication to his girls was unprecedented and relentless & will never be forgotten.

On behalf of Bruce, his family would like to thank those in the community who touched his life through loyal friendship, tremendous help & loving support.

Following the cremation there will be a private family service with interment at Prospect Cemetery (Toronto). Bruce's life will be celebrated at an open house Memorial Service to be held on November 15th from 2:00 - 5:00 pm at Bruce's beloved home in Haliburton. In lieu of flowers, donations made to the Humane Society or a charity of your choice would be appreciated by the family.
